NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Actor Karl Malden says he's more nervous about traveling since filming a television drama about a cruise ship hijacked by terrorists.

"You think twice before you say you want to travel. And I think that's terrible," he said Tuesday. "In this business I'm in you travel an awful lot."

Mel miffed

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Singer Mel Tormé says he expects to be left out of the winner's circle this year at the Grammys, thanks to his criticism of the award panel that voted him honors two years in a row.

Tormé, who will be appearing at the Sands Hotel, Casino and Country Club this weekend, blasted the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences for failing to nominate his partner on both award-winning albums, pianist George Shearing.

Back on duty

LONDON — The Duchess of York, dubbed "Her Royal Idleness" by British tabloids who accused her of preferring play to work, went back on duty at a dinner held to start a fund-raising campaign for British museums.

As royal patron of an organization called Museums Year, she was guest of honor Tuesday at the dinner attended by rock star and charity aid promoter Bob Geldof, the editor of The Times of London, Charles Wilson, and other celebrities.

Spiro better

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Spiro T. Agnew, who resigned the vice presidency 15 years ago, was in good condition after he fell from a bicycle and broke a hip during the weekend.

Agnew, 70, who lives near Eisenhower Medical Center, was admitted to the hospital Sunday afternoon after being taken there by ambulance, hospital spokesman Mike McFadden said Monday.

No-pass not causing cheating

KIM WEEKS

Area high school principals don't feel no-pass, no-play legislation is promoting cheating among students.

Letcher Tindall, principal at Karnack High School and Votto Gaddis, Hallsville High School principal, gave a firm "no" when asked if they thought students might be cheating to keep their grades up so they can participate in extra-curricular activities.

"You won't find me saying anything against no-pass, no-play," said Tindall. "There is some cheating going on, but I don't associate it with no-pass, no-play."

AUSTIN — New Texas District 1 Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, is eager to go to work, but is finding that the wheels of government turn slowly.

Interviewed minutes before he was to attend his first committee meeting Tuesday afternoon, Ratliff said: "I'm ready to work, but the system gets off to a slow start. We've organized committees, but we won't actually hear our first bills until this afternoon. It's a little frustrating."

The Mount Pleasant businessman won the seat in

Tourism boosts economy

KIM WEEKS

The Wonderland of Lights, the tours of homes, the antique stores, Caddo Lake and the bed and breakfast accommodations are all fun ways to escape for awhile.

But these activities are more than that, they are the avenues that bring in the increasingly important tourism dollars.

According to Greater Marshall Chamber of Commerce President George Carter, tourism is viewed as a non-polluting industry.

"The worst thing they (tourists) do to us is use the roads," he said. "The money they leave is almost like finding it in the street."

Like any industry, a little bit of money needs to be invested before any money can be made.

An example of making money by spending money is this year's Wonderland of Lights.

The chamber spent more than $85,000, on the festival, but a record 400,000 people came into Marshall to view the lights and spend a few dollars, according to Carter.

Carter said after speaking with the owners of Western Sizzlin', he was informed that December, traditionally the worst month for the restaurant, was the second best ever because of the festival.

"We're seeing more and more evidence of that every day," he said.

"There's no question about tourism having a big effect on the economy," said Bill Gaw, director of Marshall-Harrison County Industries. "A great percentage of the city's income comes from sales tax."

"I think tourism is important, if for no other reason, for the sales tax. The quality of life is a little better than it would be without it."

Carter said tourists are easier to attract to the community than businesses, because the competition for business is stiff.

"I ultimately hope that it will be

Marshall mulls LCUD funding

Marshall City Commissioners will meet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday to consider funding $19,969 to the Little Cypress Utility District budget for the next six months.

LCUD general manager Bill Hilliard has said the office needs the extension of funding from Marshall, Longview and Kilgore to fend off rising expenditures. Marshall's share represents 27 percent of the total budget.

Since the October bond election to partially fund construction of the reservoir failed, Hilliard and the LCUD board have approached potential large water customers such as the city of Shreveport.

Large revenue bond contracts with such users would supplement tax bonds and would still make the project feasible, Hilliard has said.

Local attorney Vernard Solomon, founder of the Say No

Again Committee, is scheduled to speak in opposition to the funding. Solomon has said the taxpayers of the area defeated the last bond election by more than a 20-point margin, and therefore the reservoir is not a priority among voters.

The city commission has also received letters of opposition from the Texas Committee on Natural Resources and Save Our Wetlands and Wildlife. Both groups campaigned to defeat the last bond election.

City Manager Tony Williams will give a report concerning Monday's meeting with the Northeast Texas Municipal Water District in Hughes Springs.

Monday, the NETMWD board approved a $70,000 engineering study of the lake to determine exactly what supplies are available.

Citizens of Granbury, a small city south of Fort Worth, took an otherwise inconsequential Texas town and turned it into a successful tourist stop.

According to Carol Hill, director of the Granbury Convention and Visitors Bureau, Granbury was "dying on the vine" in the 1960's. But a combination of luck and desire brought the town back.

Mary Lou Watkins, a former Granbury resident, bought an old hotel and restored it. She also bought an old homestead of the Nutt family and restored that.

The homestead earned a historical marker, but only a brief mention of the dedication ceremony appeared in local media.

Ms. Hill said 500 people showed up to the dedication and it became evident that there was a great interest in restoration.

"From there it caught on," she said.

Local business people began buying and restoring old homes that, "by dumb luck," had not been torn down.

The Hood County Courthouse, built in 1891, was restored during the revitalization period, as well as the old Granbury Opera House, formerly known as Kerr's Opera House.

The bottom floor of the building was used for a number of different business over the years, but in the 1970's, it was restored by a community effort and finally opened in 1975.

"No federal money was used. It was done by the town's people and now it's operated by an opera board," Ms. Hill said.

She said tourism is the top industry in the town and overtaking agriculture as the number one industry in Hood County.

An impact study of a proposal to close a bridge on the main road into town made Granbury citizens realize how important tourism is to its survival.

Ms. Hill called the bridge over the Brazos River, built in 1932, a "main artery into the town." She said it was one of the few routes tourists could get in and out of Granbury.

The bridge was not built to stand in salt water, and it was eroding. The proposal was to

Some for, some against HB 72

VAN HILBURN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final of a four-part series examining the implications of Texas' controversial no-pass, no-play rule banning extracurricular activities for students who fail courses.

Students and parents interviewed in Marshall expressed mixed reactions on House Bill 72, better known as no-pass, no-play.

Under the law, a student must pass all academic courses in order to compete in extracurricular activities. If a student fails just one academic course, then he cannot participate in any UIL-sanctioned events for six weeks.

"To me, the whole idea of going to school is to learn," said Tommy Glanton, whose son, Chris, plays football and baseball at Marshall High School and has a 92 grade point average.

"If the kid can't pass, I don't think they should be competing in any extracurricular activity," said

Glanton. "I agreed with it (HB 72) 100 percent when it came out."

"I think it's the best thing that they ever did. Kids have been coming out of our school who couldn't even read or write and I think we needed that type of rule," added Glanton.

But students affected by the law think the penalty for failing one course and not being allowed to play is too harsh.

Kevin Bobo, a senior at Waskom High School who played right tackle for the Wildcats' football team failed an agriculture course in the second six weeks and was forced to miss most of the season.

"I missed one of the most important games of season because of not passing," said Bobo, whose team lost to Tatum (13-6) and eventually finished second in the district behind the Eagles. "There were three or four of us who didn't pass and I think had we been there, we would have beaten them."

Although Bobo said he's never cheated to pass a course, some students have in order to remain eligible.

"I believe that a bunch of people are lowering their standards of education to be eligible for sports," said Bobo. "I've known people who would cheat on final exams. They needed the grade and they knew what they could do to get it."

Keith Johnson, who would have been starting for Marshall High's basketball team, failed for the second straight six-weeks grading period, thus missing almost all of the season.

"I was deeply hurt," said the 6-4 junior, who failed an algebra class two weeks ago and became ineligible, after failing an English class the prior six weeks. "I couldn't say anything for awhile."

Johnson's mother, Mary, believes the no-pass, no-play law is too harsh. "I think it's unfair in some ways. Maybe if they would lower (the standards) to 65, or punish them for three weeks. Six weeks is too long, I feel."

Johnson said many students will cheat in order to pass.

"I've cheated before in class. There's a lot of cheating and I'm sure most of them are copying homework in order to pass," he said. "Some still come up short, and those that do pass, they're not honestly passing," he said.

"It (HB 72) prompts them to cheat and take easier courses than what they should," said Bobo of Waskom. "Some will do whatever they can to pass in order to play because football is an important sport."

Bobo also thinks grades should be averaged together each six weeks to determine eligibility. "I think some students do better in some classes than in others, so they (legislators) should look at averaging all the grades," said Bobo.

Chris Glanton believes the penalty of HB 72 is alright the way it is. "If it were any less, I don't think it would be harsh enough punishment," said Chris. "Six weeks (of ineligibility) is pretty good."

"I think it's something we need," he said. "Education is the most important thing."

portant part of school) and football is something extra. It's the reward. I think studying is the number one thing. You don't go to school to play football."

Glanton would also like to see a grading system introduced for all school systems.

"I think they should have a similar grading system throughout the entire state. At one school it's easier than it is at another."

Floyd Wooten, the Marshall Mavericks' junior cornerback, wasn't able to compete in the game against Dallas Carter because he failed a course. "I was disappointed, but I learned a lesson from it. I know that I'll have to try harder in class."

Wooten also agrees with the no-pass, no-play law. "I like it. It makes a student work harder in class."

Scott Russell, another local athlete who maintains a high GPA, agrees with the law to an extent, but also believes the penalty is too harsh.

Tourism

ing business in," he said. "Maybe a new restaurant will see there is a market here."

According to some Jefferson business people, tourism is the life's blood of the Marion County. "Probably 90 percent of the sales tax comes from tourism in Jefferson," said Lylo Spellings, Jr., restaurant owner and Jefferson city commissioner.

"Without tourism, Jefferson would be just another Avinger," he said.

According to Chuck Nance, owner of the best tour business in Jefferson, tourism is the economy of Marion County.

"We don't have any big industry to put people to work," Nance said. Spellings said Jefferson has drawn several tourism-related businesses over the past five years, including restaurants and hotels.

"We've had people come in, invest money and fix up old homes for bed and breakfasts," Spellings said.

Nance and Spellings said Jefferson is a good place to get away and just relax for the weekend.

"It's kind of like going to grandma's," Nance said.

Jefferson claims homes tours, more than 30 antique shops, bed and breakfast and an interesting history, all of which draw visitors to the "sleepy" town.

The Jefferson men agree that a bit of advertising would draw even more.

"You've got to market the people who are wanting to come, the people who are interested," said Nance. "If you surveyed the tourists, 90 percent of them would say they heard about Jefferson through a friend."

"We never tried to make money off of tourism, but it keeps us going," Spellings said. "Jefferson has really never done much about advertising, but we're trying to reverse that."

Carter said he hopes to bring in some more permanent attractions to Marshall, such as year-round tours of historic homes and other visual improvements.

"I'd like to see all the facades come off the buildings and go back to the original brick work to bring people downtown to see what Marshall was," he said.

But Spellings said it's a slow process improving the looks of a town in that way. "Some businesses either can't afford to or don't want to make such improvements, and they can't be forced."

"You step on a lot of toes when you tell people they have to clean up lots and tear down homes," he said.

Howard Rosser, director of the East Texas Tourism Association said there are many ways for cities to seek help in expanding or improving their tourism business.

The ETTA, originally a department of the now-defunct East Texas Chamber of Commerce, has developed into an association representing chambers of commerce, convention and visitors bureaus and hotels and restaurants in 76 counties.

ETTA offers a number of services for these organizations, Rosser said.

In the area of marketing, ETTA publishes the East Texas Vacation Guide and other publications which are distributed all over East Texas and all over the country. "These publications contain both an advertisement and a write-up about each participating entity."

Rosser said ETTA has attended tourism shows in Minnesota, Chicago and Baltimore, Maryland. While there, he said they set up booths, pass out the literature and invite people to East Texas.

In addition to spreading the word, ETTA provides community services by helping individual groups "discover and develop their natural and man-made attractions, and begin special events."

When an individual community has done all it can do to bring in tourism, plan events, Rosser said they begin to burn out and run out of ideas. He said ETTA helps to solve that problem by bringing these entities together.

"It's a renewing thing," he said. "The reason we're successful is we are able to bring new ideas to people and bring people in from outside with new ideas."

of Marshall High School, said he has no seen evidence of cheating as a result of the law.

"More cheating in the classroom is something we see everywhere," he said.

Something that might result from the no-pass, no-play rule is a greater number of students doing the more difficult or honors classes in order to maintain eligibility.

Ratliff

Ratliff said the major issues to face the lawmakers this session will be workers' compensation reform, school finance, prisons, and, as always, the budget.

The new senator said he studied most of the issues well enough during his campaign to know where he stands.

"I am absolutely convinced that we need total reform of workers' compensation. I hope the reform forces will stay hatched and that they will not accept a watered-down version."

Despite the fact that the Supreme Court has overturned the Edgewood versus Kirby decision which declared school financing unconstitutional, Ratliff said "the system does not deal fairly with poorer school districts."

"We still need to do something to make for equality for the poor districts. There is inequality in school financing."

The state senator said more prisons must be built. "We have criminals who are refusing probation and wanting to be sent to prison because they know they can be out on parole later than they can complete probation."

"They know that they will be back on the streets after serving a month or two" because of prison overcrowding. "There's no question that we have to build more prisons."

"That's not the total answer," Ratliff said. "We still have to get a handle on what's causing them to become a part of that lifestyle, but we've got to keep putting them away."

Ratliff said the issue of funding prison construction will cause considerable debate. "We'll have to decide on financing, whether to issue bonds as the governor has suggested or take some other route."

Ratliff said the matter which may be of greatest concern to the 1st District is that of rural health care. "It's not unique to the district, but it is probably of greater concern because this is a more rural area."

"We will address a formula for Medicaid and will probably approve some additional medical malpractice relief, which should be of help."

Ratliff said he has found the Texas Legislature to be "a very hospitable place, especially the Senate. They have been very willing and ready to help me get my feet on the ground."

"The Senate staff has been most helpful and it's been an easy transition so far," he said.

"I guess my major feeling is one of pride. I feel proud to be representing the 1st District and I hope I can do it in a manner that they approve of."

close the bridge down, but after the impact study, they realized that closing the bridge would stop the tourists from entering and possibly close the town.

"We realized that tourism is the bread and butter of the town," Granbury now draws a crowd of tourists with the help of advertising, marketing and a good attitude.

EPA cleans Waskom site

WASKOM -- The site of a former trucking company near the Louisiana state line is one of 18 statewide now being cleaned up by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Waskom facility was chosen by the EPA because of extensive water and soil contamination there, but federal officials say cleanups of all sites are progressing well.

The contamination at Waskom resulted from the cleanup of trucks used to haul creosote, resins and glues.

Soil and water samples taken at the site in 1984 revealed contamination, but after continuous monitoring, officials believe now the site should be dropped from the agency's priority list of dangerous sites.

EPA officials stated in a recent status report of all Superfund sites that most are in final stages of cleanup. There are 1,175 such sites nationwide.

Tower facing tough questions

Associated Press WASHINGTON — John Tower faced serious questions about scaling back Pentagon spending and about his personal ties to defense contractors as the Senate Armed Services Committee prepared to open hearings today on his nomination to run the Defense Department.

The former Texas senator would expect to be treated with special courtesy by his former colleagues this afternoon in the historic Senate Chamber, Room 316 of the U.S. Capitol, where the world-famous Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings took place.

But the 63-year-old Tower, who emerged as President Bush's nominee after an exhaustive background check, was certain to be quizzed on his consulting work for defense contractors and his private life, as well as on defense policy and overall Pentagon funding.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday he expects the hearings to be marked by some controversy based on the reports that have already been raised in the media.

"There's enough out there," Dixon said. "Confirmation hearings are under way for two other Bush appointees."

Commerce Secretary-designate Robert M. Lauder was warmly received Tuesday before the Senate Commerce Committee. Lawmakers told the Texas oilman he should make the government a more aggressive advocate for American businesses in the world marketplace.

Today marked the start of hearings on Samuel K. Skinner's appointment as transportation secretary.

OPINION

Ted Bundy truly deserved electric chair

Theodore "Ted" Bundy is dead. Called a "diabolical genius" and "the most competent serial killer of our time" by the judge who sentenced him to the electric chair, Bundy paid for his murderous attacks on young women with his life.

Bundy was arrested 10 years ago and has been fighting execution for more than a decade. His fight ended Tuesday when he was electrocuted in Florida's electric chair.

His fight for survival, which was an eternity compared to his 30-plus victims, is a travesty of the justice system of the United States, and a condemnation of the appeals system of this country.

Four times Ted Bundy was scheduled for execution; three times he was saved by appeals and last-minute reprieves. It almost happened the fourth time, when four Supreme Court justices wanted to spare his life; five, however, said he deserved to die, that he had a fair trial, that justice be done.

Bundy's lawyers and the American Civil Liberties Union tried to get another stay. Oh, how they tried. During the last 24 hours, as many as six appeals, based on everything from Bundy's mental condition to the size of his socks, were filed. All, fortunately, were turned down, but the fact that the last-minute appeal process is allowed leads to an undermining of the basic capital justice system.

After 10 years and four books about the murders, and after exhaustive research and appeals, there was nothing left on which to base an appeal. That, however, didn't stop the anti-execution clique.

If ever a human being deserved to die, it was Ted Bundy. He had a fetish for young women, from 12 to 25, all tall, all with long straight hair, parted in the middle. He saw them, stalked them, brutally murdered them and raped them, sometimes before they died, sometimes after.

He committed as many as 36 murders, and admitted to 20. He was proud of the fact that he was able to elude authorities for years, having committed the murders in six states.

The threat of capital punishment did not deter Ted Bundy from his appointed avocation. But the reality of capital punishment will make sure he never kills another human being.

Viewed in that perspective, the death of Ted Bundy was an appropriate response to his acts.

George Bush's extended hand better have something in it

WALTER R. MEARS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — That outstretched hand President Bush is offering the Democrats had better have something in it when they sit down for hard bargaining on the budget. The words and the gesture were eloquent, but congressional Democrats are going to want something more concrete. Bush said what he wants to bargain about; the question now is what he'll bring to the table to negotiate with. He's holding his first congressional leadership meeting at the White House today.

Analysis

Bush recalled a time when Congress and administrations worked together to produce budgets on which the nation could live. "Let us negotiate sound and hard," he said in his inaugural address. "The people ... did not send us here to bicker. They ask us to rise above the merely partisan."

But taxes and spending were part of the amendment Bush aimed at the Democrats during the campaign that won him the White House. On a hundred platforms he said Congress would try to force him into imposing new taxes and he'd say no. "Read my lips, no new taxes."

The targets of Bush's favorite applause line aren't likely to forget the way it was used against them. They've already said that Bush will have to narrow the deficit gap without taxes or eat his campaign words and propose steps to increase revenue. Furthermore, the tax question leads to the broader issues of spending priorities, which embroiled the White House and congressional Democrats for all eight years of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Dever offers a 'Square Deal' at his Brenham cab company

M.T. Dever has the Square Deal Taxi Company in Brenham.

"I don't take people out of the way and overcharge them," says Mr. Dever. "Square Deal means four sides. And every one of them is equal."

He started driving a cab in Brenham more than 50 years ago. He was the first cab driver in the city. Other cab companies have come and gone in Brenham during the past half century, but Mr. Dever's taxi is the only one in business there now.

His first cab was a 1929 Ford two-door he built with junk parts.

"People always bothered me to take them home because I was free to do that," he says. "So many of them begged me to charge a fee and start running 'jitney'."

He began charging passengers a quarter a ride. Within a few years, he had enough money to buy a Dodge. Then he bought a Chevrolet with a knee axle. "That's what they called it then," he says. "Made steerin' easy. Every year I would improve and move up to where I am now."

His current taxi is a 1982 Plymouth with 147,000 miles on it.

"It's just about worn out," admits Mr. Dever, "but I'm trustin' it to last into 1986. That's when I'll get another one."

Under the circumstances, new-look bipartisanship would be ideal for Bush if he can get it. He's determined to try. As he put it in a pre-inauguration interview:

"Using Lyndon Johnson's words, maybe different methods, let's reason together."

Winter waves bring surfers out

Associated Press

GALVESTON — As sea gulls career overhead, low-headed youths crouch atop slickly waxed surfboards, waiting for the crashing ocean waves to knock them into the water.

On shore, teen-age girls ride slowly by on bicycles, waving at their water-bound companions as they wheel passed neon-painted Volkswagen Bugs crowned with gleaming, silver surfboard racks.

Summer in Malibu? Try winter in Galveston.

Today, the waves looked like Snake River whitewater. Belling, foaming and crashing over each other, great for surfing — right? "This is really pretty bad,"

17-year-old Houston surfer Joey Yburra says. "Here you've got breaker, breaker, breaker, all little ones. What you want are one or two clean breakers that go all the way through."

"It's really too rough out there right now."

Galveston winter brings the closest thing to real waves the area ever gets. Surfers say it's due to the fact that Galveston is on the Gulf of Mexico, and not a "real ocean," that the waves are so small.

Though admittedly weak, winter waves still are much stronger than the non-existent summer surf, and the Houston and Galveston County youths in search of endless summer hit the beach in earnest when they time off from school.

Bedecked in their protective black wetsuits to protect themselves from the 50-degree waves, they're like frolicking seals dotting the beach, waiting for the jetties off Seawall Boulevard.

"In the summer the only time you get waves is during a hurricane," says Yburra. "During Gilbert if you went a little further west, there were some real waves."

The surfers stay between the seawall jetties because the rock walls block the strong Galveston current from sweeping the swimmers out to sea. Jetties also cause the waves to break better, the youth surfers point out.

Rival Waskom edges Karnack

Hill leads Lady 'Cats to 64-61 win in 20-2A

KARNACK — Whenever Waskom and Karnack meet on the court, count on a heated contest, filled with all the emotional hoopla that goes along with any good, old-fashioned rivalry.

Tuesday's District 20-2A girls basketball game, played before a capacity crowd at Karnack gym, was no exception.

The Waskom Lady Wildcats nipped the hosting Lady Indians in the winning seconds, 64-61, on a basket by Kim Hill.

In the final 35 seconds of regulation, Karnack committed two crucial turnovers that cost them the game.

Waskom's Cynthia Moore scored with 31 seconds left off a Karnack turnover, pulling the Lady Indians to within two points, 61-59.

After another Indian turnover, Hill took an inbound pass from halfcourt, dribbled the halfcourt length, and sank a layup to tie the score at 61-61.

But the Lady Wildcats' stellar performer was fouled on the shot and went to the free throw line. It was good, sending the Wildcats ahead 62-61, as Waskom fans poured onto the floor to celebrate.

But with five seconds still left in the contest, Waskom's celebration was cut short and the Lady Indians' had one last attempt to tie.

Hill, who scored a game-high 30 points, came through again by stealing a pass from the Lady Indians, and getting fouled as time expired. She sank the ensuing free throw to seal another chapter in the Waskom vs. Karnack rivalry, 64-61.

An elated Waskom coach Debra Robinson, who graduated from Karnack, said second-half hustle was the reason the Lady Wildcats won.

Karnack coach Fred Wilson said turnovers toward the end hurt the Lady Indians' chances of pulling off a victory. "They stole a couple of passes that hurt us, but we just didn't keep them down when we had to," said Wilson. "But the kids played a great game. Anytime they go out and give it their all like they did tonight, that's all you can ask from them."

The Lady Indians were ahead at half time, 29-26, but Karnack outscored Waskom, 21-16, in the second half to take a 47-41 advantage into the fourth stanza.

The Lady Indians, behind impressive performances from senior forward Rhettella Thomas and junior guard Tina Esters, led by as much as eight points in the third quarter, before Waskom started chipping away at the lead.

Thomas led Karnack with 23 points and Esters followed with 22, including a fourth-quarter stretch where she canned four straight baskets for the Lady Indians. Daniels added 19 for the Lady Wildcats and Moore finished with 12, six of those coming in the early stages of the fourth stanza.

Although the game was for some bragging rights between these two neighboring towns, there was more at stake for the winner.

Waskom, Karnack and Joquin were in a three-way tie for second behind league-leading Tatum entering the contest. Now Waskom, which improved to 17-7 overall and 7-2 in district, shares the district's No. 2 spot with Joquin, which defeated Tatum Tuesday night.

Karnack coach Wilson, in his eighth year at the school, thinks the Lady Indians will come through down the stretch.

"In our second trip to the play-offs (1988), we were in the same situation that we're in now," said Wilson. "We had to go on the road to win the rest of our games. We did it, then and I believe we can do it now."

Karnack travels to Joquin next Tuesday, but will go to Union Grove on Friday. "We have a hard road ahead, but I believe we can do it," said Wilson.

Wilson has coached his teams into the playoffs five of the past eight years, winning district titles in three of the five seasons in either 2A or 1A.

Super Bowl games could become top TV shows

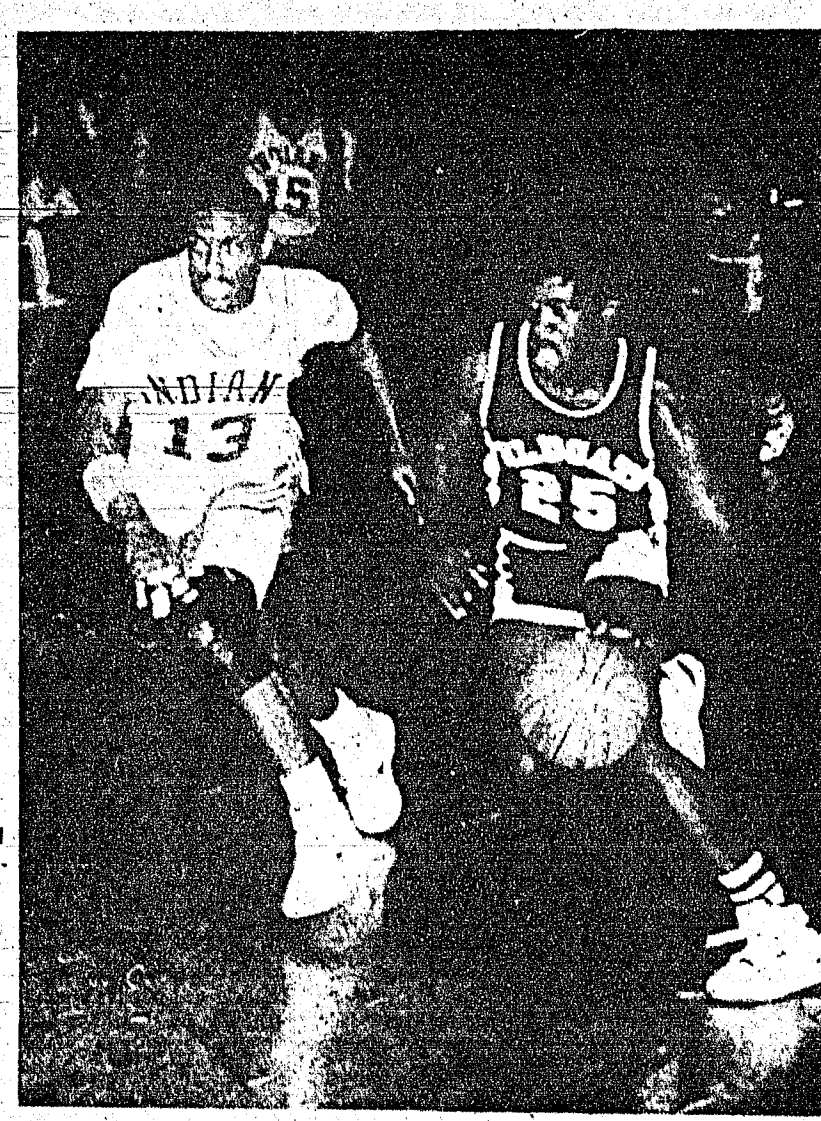

NEW YORK — Television history's three most-watched shows could all be Super Bowls — knocking the farewell episode of M.A.S.H. to fourth place when final viewership figures are tallied on San Francisco's 20-16 victory over Cincinnati, NBC says.

"We won't know for sure until more results are in," network spokesman Doug Kelly said, "it takes about five to seven working days to find out. We're in position to reach 120 million, and possibly go higher, but we really don't know yet."

The most-watched show in history was NBC's 1986 Super Bowl

PALESTINE — The Marshall High soccer team recorded its first win of the season, and they did it in a big way, shutting out the Palestine Wildcats, 6-0, in non-district play.

John White scored Marshall's first goal off a Brent Hamill assist early in the first half, and Tony Ellis scored an unassisted shot about the midway point to send the Mavs up 2-0.

Michael Hollis scored late in the opening half to give the Mavs a 3-0 advantage entering intermission. The Mavs came out in the second half with three more goals. Twis Troy and Tom Overbeck teamed up for the first goal, when Damon Ryan scored off an assist from White. Guy Wagner kicked in the final shot off a White assist.

The Mavericks improved to 1-2 overall and will host Whitehouse Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Marshall girls nab 51-34 win

After a sluggish start, the Marshall Mavericks found some second and fourth quarter momentum to surge past visiting Texas High, 51-34, Tuesday in 18-5A play.

Marshall held a 34-13 half time advantage and was up 32-24 entering the final stanza, when they outscored the Lady Tigers, 19-10, to post their third league win against four losses.

The Lady Mavericks had three players score in double figures, led by senior guard Tammy Jefferson, who pumped in 15 points. Kerrie Coffield and Kim Mitchell each added 14, while Julia Martin chipped in six.

Coffield, a 5-11 junior forward, scored six first-quarter points to help the Mavs to a slim 12-8. Mitchell scored 12 of the Mavericks' second-quarter assault that saw Marshall outscore Texas High 12-5 and enter halftime up 24-13.

Texas High outscored Marshall 11-8 in the third stanza, but the Lady Mavericks trio of Jefferson, Mitchell and Coffield combined for all of Marshall's fourth quarter points to seal the win.

The Lady Mavs improved to 10-12 overall and will travel to Nacogdoches on Friday.

First-year coach Anton Tippett was impressed with the Mavs' performance. "I think we did a good job. It took us a while to get warmed up, but once we did, we started playing good basketball."

AL owners reject Eddie Chiles' bid to buy Rangers

Associated Press

CHICAGO — American League owners have rejected Edward L. Gaylord's attempt to purchase majority interest in the Texas Rangers, the team's owner, Eddie Chiles, said.

Gaylord owns about one-third of the Rangers' stock and wants to buy an additional 58 percent. Baseball owners reportedly have opposed Gaylord's bid because they do not want another team owned by a broadcasting company.

Major League Baseball ownership committee this afternoon that they have reached a recommendation that the transaction between himself and Mr. Gaylord not be approved in accordance with the guidelines for the transfer of controlling interest that were adopted by baseball in 1985, Chiles said.

A number of other investors, including former Rangers executive Larry Schmitt, have expressed interest in buying the franchise. A son of President Bush also has expressed interest.

Reinsdorf said earlier that some owners were concerned about the change in ownership of a team when it is broadcasting the team's games.

Reinsdorf said in a statement, "The change in ownership needed 11 votes in the AL and seven votes in the National League."

Gaylord is president of Oklahoma Publishing Co., the parent company for Gaylord Broadcasting Co., which owns Fort Worth's KTVT-TV.

DPS reports decrease in traffic fatalities

Rural fatal accidents in the Tyler Highway Patrol District increased by 3 percent and deaths decreased by 1 percent during 1985 from 1984. During 1985, highway patrol troopers investigated 2,807 accidents in the district, including 157 fatal accidents claiming 171 lives. There were 1,468 accidents in the 18 county area, in which 4,159 people were injured.

These totals for 1985 represent a 2 percent decrease in fatal accidents and a 3 percent decrease in deaths compared to the three year average for 1982 through 1984, according to Captain Tony White, Tyler district commander.

White said approximately 32 percent of the rural fatal accidents were alcohol related.

"We were pleased over the decrease in deaths and feel the decrease can primarily be attributed to mandatory safety belt statutes," said White.

During December 1985, troopers investigated 480 accidents in the district, including 13 fatalities that claimed 15 lives and 105 injuries that injured 325 persons. Property damage accidents totaled 273 this month.

Rural accident statistics for area counties during 1985 are:

- Harrison yearly totals - 806 accidents, 22 deaths, 354 injuries. December 1985 totals: 48 accidents, 2 deaths, 80 injuries.
- Marion yearly totals - 187 accidents, 3 deaths, 100 injuries. December 1985 totals: 8 accidents, no deaths, 10 injuries.
- Polk yearly totals - 219 accidents, 10 deaths, 175 injuries. December 1985 totals: 22 accidents, 2 deaths, 10 injuries.

Soviets give factory workers flour

KABUL, Afghanistan - Soviet troops, shouldering what one of their generals has called Moscow's new task of feeding Kabul, today distributed 275 tons of air-lifted flour and heating fuel to more than 8,000 workers at a state-owned factory.

The distribution at a concrete block factory - in the presence of invited Western correspondents - was noticeably orderly compared with unruly scenes of Afghan soldiers beating back crowds from Soviet armored personnel carriers during other emergency handouts in the capital last week.

BANGKOK, Thailand - The pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia has signed an agreement with the U.N. refugee agency to allow Cambodian refugees to return home from camps along the Thai border, state radio reported today.

An official Cambodian government broadcast said the agreement, signed Monday in Phnom Penh, deals with "principles and procedures to welcome back voluntarily repatriated Cambodian refugees."

Japan's prime minister rejects call to resign

TOKYO - Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita today rejected opposition calls for him to quit after a third member of his Cabinet resigned over links to a company at the center of a stock-trading scandal.

Also today, the Labor Ministry announced the resignations of its two top bureaucrats who also have been linked to the company.

Takeshita, scheduled to travel to Washington in a week for a meeting with President Bush, was hit Tuesday with the resignation of Ken Haraoka from the Cabinet post of director general of the Economic Planning Agency.

SIDON, Lebanon - Two Shiite Moslem militias battled with mortars and machine guns in south Lebanon today several hours after negotiators for both sides reached a cease-fire accord in Syria.

Police said at least five fighters were injured in the one-hour battle between the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, and the pro-Syrian Amal militia in south Lebanon's Apple province.

SHARORA, U.S.S.R. - Officials said today the death toll from an earthquake and mudslide in Soviet Central Asia was only about a quarter of the 1,000 originally estimated, and they called off efforts to find more survivors.

"We will transform the settlement of Sharora into a common grave with a monument to commemorate the victims of this catastrophe," said Khusanov, Communist Party chief in the Tadzhikistan republic's stricken Gissar region.

He said there was no hope of finding more survivors in Sharora, where 32 homes were buried and 100 bodies were hauled from the mud and debris.

Entertaining: a cherished pastime of two local CPAs

When Mac and Claudia Abney of Marshall began designing their home in 1980, they both knew they wanted a floor plan that would lend itself to entertaining friends and family members.

Not only did the Abneys get just the arrangement they were hoping for - a large, centralized kitchen and plenty of dining space - but Mrs. Abney developed quite a flair for cooking, which her friends and husband boast about.

The Abneys, both certified public accountants for their business, Abney and Company, enjoy having company in their home, especially on the weekends. They like to dedicate their time during the week to their children, Blair, 11, and Karen, 9.

"Mac and I enjoy entertaining family and friends in our home," said Mrs. Abney. "I especially like the planning process of a dinner party."

For Thanksgiving, the couple, married 15 years now, had 25 family members stay in their home for five days. "It was a lot of fun."

"Even a couple of neighbor kids started showing up," Abney added. "We love having children at our house, and we like big appetites," said Mrs. Abney.

Frequently, the Abneys prepare breakfast for a large group of members of their church on Sunday mornings. "We usually prepare the Sunday Breakfast Casserole, muffins and a fruit which is in season."

Though Mrs. Abney did not spend much time in the kitchen growing up, except to make cookies every now and then, she has collected several recipes from family and friends over the years and has come to enjoy reading cookbooks.

"I never had time to cook until I married. My first attempt at preparing dinner for Mac was so bad that we had to go out for hamburgers," she recalled. "I've come a long way since then."

Growing up in Arkansas, Mrs. Abney remembers her mother entertaining large groups of people. Not realizing it at the time, she was becoming an example for her daughter. "She is a wonderful cook and has been a great influence on my life."

A similar pattern is forming between Mrs. Abney and her daughter, Karen, who loves being in the kitchen. "I think we're raising a 9-year-old cook," said her husband. "She sure can scramble a mean egg."

In addition to preparing specialties, such as Forgotten Chocolate Chip Cookies, Cheese Bites and Chicken Pie, for entertaining, Mrs. Abney enjoys canning tomatoes, green beans and other vegetables. "Mac has a green thumb, and we usually have a great garden."

Tips for retaining nutrients of foods

Once you have selected fresh produce, it is important to prepare it so nutrients are retained. Nutrients, especially water-soluble vitamins, may be lost into the cooking liquid. These are called water-soluble vitamins. They are destroyed by heat, oxidation, light, and an acid or alkaline cooking liquid. Minerals are never destroyed.

Solution losses occur with minerals, vitamin C, and the B-complex vitamins. These nutrients are dissolved into the cooking liquid. If the liquid is discarded, then these nutrients are truly lost. Solution losses also occur with water-soluble vitamins. About 50 percent of the water-soluble nutrients are present in the liquid.

Some solution losses are unavoidable when preparing food, however, they can be minimized in the following ways:

- (1) Avoid soaking food when possible; use soaking liquid for the cooking liquid.
- (2) Cook vegetables with the least amount of water, such as stir fry, steaming or pressure cooker methods.
- (3) Cook vegetables as quickly as possible; cook only until crisp-tender. Light boiling water and use a lid to retain heat.
- (4) Use cooking liquid whenever possible in gravies, sauces, soups and stews.

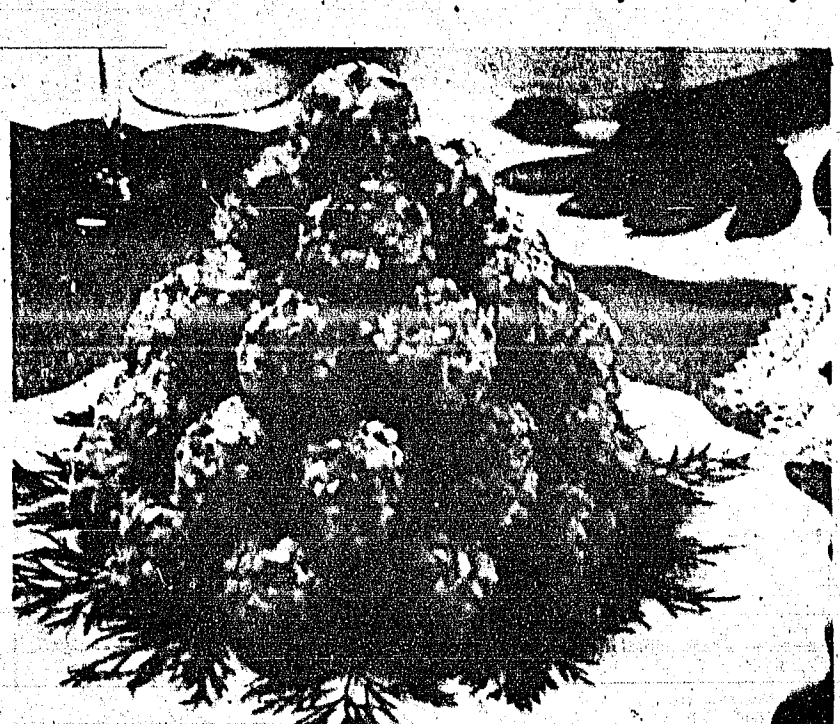

Minerals that can be destroyed by heat are thiamin, vitamin C, pyridoxine (vitamin B6), folic acid, vitamin B12 and riboflavin. Reducing or keeping the cooking time to a minimum will help prevent heat destruction of vitamins.

Folic acid, riboflavin, pyridoxine, vitamin B12, vitamin E, vitamin A and vitamin K are destroyed by light. Milk is an excellent source of riboflavin. Considerable destruction of the vitamin occurs if milk is allowed to stand in the light. Milk cartons help prevent this destruction. Thiamin, folic acid and vitamin C are destroyed in an alkaline medium. Baking soda will produce an alkaline medium. Therefore, excess soda should not be used in baked products. Sometimes soda is added to green vegetables during cooking to retain the green color. This addition could result in the destruction of the above nutrients. It will also make the vegetables mushy.

Classic cold pack cheese perfect for entertaining

Whether your hospitality is perfectly planned or completely spontaneous, one fact is certain: today's busy lifestyle doesn't allow the luxury of devoting unlimited time to food preparation. So, keep this successful strategy in mind: rely on the ease of informal buffets and tailor menus to quick-fix convenience foods. This is where the versatility of cold pack cheese comes to the rescue as a classic entertainer throughout the year.

Perhaps you've already discovered the rich taste of this distinctive sharp cheddar cheese and its smooth spreadability on toast or crackers and as an ideal recipe ingredient. Offer guests a new taste experience that may very well compete with the traditional large party cheese ball. Mini cheese balls. They're flavorful finger foods made from naturally aged sharp cheddar cheese and cheddar marbled with port wine. Best of all, there is no recipe for these nutritious snacks because they come conveniently packaged by the dozen in local markets. If an edible centerpiece intrigues you, mini cheese balls can be held together with toothpicks and arranged in circular layers, pyramid style, on a serving platter. Expand your stock of convenience foods to include the few ingredients you'll need for a fast and fabulous Hot Crab Dip. It begins with natural sharp cheddar cold pack cheese that comes in handy containers in the dairy case or by the piece in the specialty cheese section. Reach into your freezer for frozen crabmeat and have a few other staples ready to go. Garnish the prepared dip with scallions, offering a choice of raw vegetable dippers: brilliant red cherry tomatoes, sugar snap peas and baby carrots. You'll be sure to collect a dividend of compliments.

These mini cheese balls come conveniently packaged by the dozen in local markets. Team them with a fast and fabulous easy-to-make Hot Crab Dip.

TV consumer advocate continues fight against toy gun look-alikes

Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — For the 17 months since a disturbed man walked onto a KABC news set and pointed a toy gun at consumer reporter David Horowitz, he has waged a personal campaign against look-alike play weapons.

Horowitz, a 22-year veteran reporter who covered the Vietnam war for NBC, has had some of his longest days and nights wrangling with manufacturers and retailers over toy guns that look like the real thing.

It was just such a phony weapon, a Daisy BB pistol that looked like a Colt 45 automatic pistol, that Gary Stollman pointed at Horowitz on Aug. 19, 1987, as he demanded that Horowitz read a handwritten statement while on the air.

Horowitz complied, but the broadcast went nowhere after a few seconds because KABC's director Tom Capra ordered the station to "go to black" — shut down the broadcast signal.

"I was lucky I had my reading glasses on," said Horowitz, referring to the bizarre, barely legible statement handed him by Stollman.

During the short time the incident was on the air, Horowitz calmly asked the name and hometown of Stollman, the son of a KABC reporter whose contract was not renewed that summer.

"It was the only thing I could think of," Horowitz said. "I also thought that if I could get out a few hints to police who this was and where he was from, they could follow leads."

The broadcast journalist was questioned by Stollman about the sudden appearance of the "statement" on studio monitors. Technicians were on strike at NBC at the time, and Horowitz told Stollman that while there occasional difficulties, the station was still probably on the air.

The last lines of Stollman's note stated the gun he was holding was a harmless toy. When Horowitz read that, the 33-year-old man put the pistol down and was rushed by waiting police as news anchor John Beard grabbed the gun.

Stollman later was placed on three years of intensively supervised probation.

Horowitz, meanwhile, intensified a campaign he had already started against the marketing of realistic toy guns.

The effort, almost a second career, comes in addition to his Washington reporter job at KABC and his syndicated "Fight Back" television show.

Burbank, the city where KABC's studios are located, was the first locality to ban the sale of the toy guns. In August 1987, Los Angeles, Oakland and San Francisco followed suit. And in October of 1988, California Gov. George Deukmejian signed a statewide ban on the sale, manufacture and distribution of realistic firearms.

But a few weeks after the state legislation was signed, Horowitz got a telephone call from Washington which told him all his personal campaigning was about to be crushed.

A congressional source told him that Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., had attached a rider to a late-session energy bill. The rider called for some part of toy guns to be made of bright orange plastic, and the federal law would supersede the tougher state and local laws already passed.

"I took this very personally," said Horowitz, who has campaigned ed in 15 states and as many as 30 cities across the country. He also estimates he has received 75,000 pieces of mail over the months on the subject of toy guns.

In the 1960s and '70s, Jack Lemmon was an ace at portraying the American male struggling financially under the pressures of modern society. James Woods seems to have inherited Lemmon's mantle. While he lacks Lemmon's leavening humor, Woods packs greater intensity into his characterizations of tormented souls of the '80s.

In "The Boost," he tries to cope with life in the fast lane and falls. What defeats him are booze, cocaine, uppers and downers, as well as his own foolishness and misguided pride.

Woods is a small-time hustler barely earning a living in the New York financial world. His wife, sensitively played by Sean Young, Gene Hackman's mistress-victim in "No Way Out," is impressed by his characterizations of tormented souls of the '80s.

Applying for a corporate job, he nearly blows the chance with his radical ideas. But executive Steven Hill is impressed, and he brings the young man to Los Angeles to sell tax shelters. Woods is a whiz, and soon he acquires the trappings and habits of the fast set in Los Angeles: meaning money with views and people, fast cars and cocaine.

When the government clamps down on tax shelters, Woods' bubble bursts. To pay his debts and cocaine bills, he steals $20,000 from his boss. The rest is all downhill, husband and wife together. They try to go straight, hiding out in Santa Cruz. But Woods returns to his old habits, and the downward slide continues.

Daryl Poncane's well-crafted script curiously underscores the folly of drug addiction, and Harold Becker's direction spares none of the sordid details. It is a grim tale but not totally convincing. Que-release produced by Daniel H. Blatt with Mel Howard as coproducer. The rating is R for repeated drug use and language. Running time: 98 minutes.

Woods fascinates throughout; you watch him like an undetonated bomb. Sean Young, Gene Hackman's mistress-victim in "No Way Out," is impressive in a role with less definition. Steven Hill manages to add substance to every film in which he appears.

Miss America likes having short fingernails

ST. PAUL, Minn. — When she was crowned Miss America four months ago, Gretchen Carlson said her selection showed that the pageant is interested in brains and talent, not just looks.

"It shows that I'm not a bimbo, that I do have intelligence and that I do represent what every woman wants to be in this society, which is a career woman, and be respected for her intelligence," said Carlson, a Stanford University junior from Annapolis.

Carlson appeared at a school in Minnesota and the Children's Hospital of St. Paul on Monday. When she met Marcus Jackson, 15, at the hospital, he looked at her hands and said, "Miss America with no fingernails?"

A violinist can't have long nails, said Carlson, who had just returned from President Bush's inauguration in Washington. "I put on fake ones for the inauguration, but as soon as I got back to Minnesota I ripped them off, because I had to practice."

Princess Diana says soaps influence young to drink

LONDON — Teetotaling Princess Diana on Tuesday blamed soap operas for influencing people to drink.

Diana, the patron for an alcoholism center in England, was referring to two popular British soap operas, both of which feature scenes in pubs.

She spent an hour Tuesday touring the Camberwell Alcohol Project, a center run by Turning Point, the largest national voluntary organization for people with drug, alcohol and mental health problems.

'One Life to Live' stars film episode at Duke

RIEHAM, N.C. — For actress Jensen Buchanan, a trip to school seemed like a vacation.

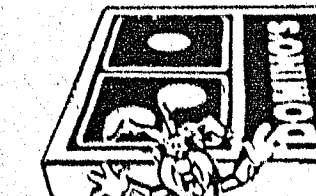

She and other cast members of "One Life to Live" are at Duke University this week, filming episodes of the ABC-TV soap opera to be broadcast next month.

"I'm trying to look at it like a vacation," Miss Buchanan said. "There's a lot of pomp and circumstance for a little bit of action."

Insurance board 'mismanaged'

Governor Clements says chairman won't resign

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements predicted that one State Board of Insurance member would resign over recent allegations of mismanagement, but the governor said it would not be Edwin Smith Jr., his friend and board chairman. "I don't expect him to resign," Clements said. "There are a lot of problems over there, but I'd say about 90 percent of those problems are not any of his doing."

Smith, who was appointed by Clements, took office about 15 months ago.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, has called for the resignations of Smith and board members David Thornberry and James Nelson after an investigation of the agency, which regulates the insurance industry in Texas.

Montford's report, based on an investigation by former FBI agent Eugene Gee, said "dangerous mismanagement" of the agency created "an open invitation to those intent on committing fraud to come to Texas and prey on the unknown insurance purchasers and policyholders."

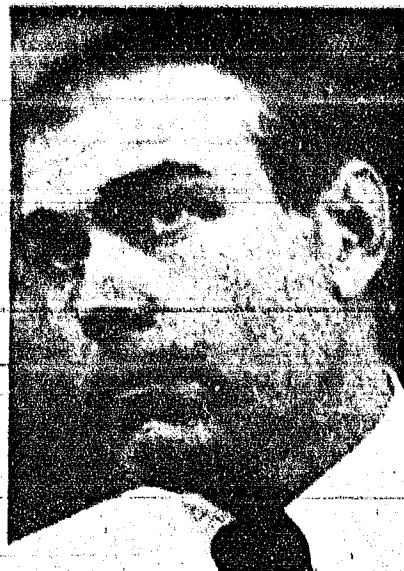

Clements said he did not plan to ask for insurance Board resignations, but he predicted they would occur.

"One (member), perhaps, might resign, under the circumstances," the governor said, but he refused to name the member. He said only that it would not be Smith.

Edwin J. Smith

"Certainly there are some problems over there. I want to emphasize that these problems didn't happen yesterday," Clements said. "They've been festering for a long time."

"Let's not rush into condemning an individual who's only been there for a short while," Clements said. Clements made public Tuesday a report on the insurance Board by former Department of Public Safety director Col. Jim Adams, conducted at the board's request.

The report said, "Although no allegations were made of criminal violations or wrongdoing, and no evidence of such was found," the agency's problems were based on bad management and lack of action when problems were discovered. Clements said Adams' report shows the agency's problems began at least five years ago.

Smith on Monday took a verbal beating when he testified before Montford's Senate State Affairs Committee about the findings in Montford's report.

That inquiry determined the Insurance Board and staff failed to take over failing insurance companies in a timely manner, thus placing the public at risk of not being able to collect on insurance claims.

The report also cited "wholesale hiring of unqualified, untrained individuals" within the agency, and noted a high incidence of hiring based on cronyism.

"I would say that it's a very significant mess, and it may take longer than just a few short months to clean that mess up," Clements said.

The governor said "perhaps we'll have more action" on the problems after he appoints a new member to replace Nelson, whose term expires Jan. 31.

"I'm considering some very capable people who are experienced and bring to the commission a very high sense of integrity," Clements said. "And perhaps that's the key word as to what's happened in the past."

Law to limit abortions is planned

Associated Press

AUSTIN — State lawmakers and anti-abortionists have proposed legislation that would make it the growing practice of women having abortions based on sex selection.

"Surely, this is the most frivolous use of abortion yet in the history of the state," said Bill Price, director of the Texas Coalition for Life.

Price said more women are having abortions after learning of the sex of the fetus. Usually, the women prefer to have a male child and get an abortion if the fetus is a female, he said.

"In other words," said state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, "abortion on demand has given rise to boys on demand."

Brown and state Rep. L.B. Kubiak, D-Rockdale, said they will introduce legislation that would make it illegal for doctors to perform an abortion based on sex selection.

Price and the legislators conceded it would be difficult to enforce the law, but Price said, "All it will take is one or two doctors... being prosecuted and it will greatly put a damper on the willingness of physicians to do these kinds of abortions."

Danallynn Reecer, a local spokeswoman for the National Organization for Women, said from 1 percent in 1973 to 20 percent in 1988.

Rep. Kubiak said he thinks the situation is tragic. "My feeling is laws and hypothesize on what kind of atrocities could occur and then they hype them up and make the public believe that is common," he said.

Ms. Reecer said she thinks sex selection abortions are "morally reprehensible. It's the ultimate in sexism."

But she said, any law limiting a woman's right to an abortion would increase the likelihood of deaths and injuries from illegal or self-induced abortions.

Price cited a survey that said the number of medical geneticists who are supportive of pre-natal diagnosis for sex selection rose from 1 percent in 1973 to 20 percent in 1988.

Rep. Kubiak said he thinks the situation is tragic. "My feeling is that if you can do it for that, well then, what's next? Why can't you do it for hair color, why can't you do it for eye color? Where are we going?" he said.

Two other legislators, spoke in favor of a bill that would require minors to gain parental approval before getting an abortion.

Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, has filed the bill in the Senate and Rep. Dan Shelby, R-Crosby, will file a similar bill in the House.

Ms. Reecer said the law would "force teen-agers into the underground abortion market."

She said some parents are not appropriate on the subject of abortion, or sex, which, in some cases, might have contributed to the unwanted pregnancy.

Work safety bill is introduced

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A "right-to-work-safety" bill has been introduced by a senator who said it would help solve the problem of rising workers' compensation costs as well as protecting workers from crippling accidents and death.

Currently, a workman has no rights at all to refuse to enter an unsafe work situation," Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, told a news conference.

He said Texas leads the nation in industrial deaths and in frequency of serious, crippling accidents.

"We've heard a lot of talk by some high-paid lobbyists who traverse the state telling employers that the world is about to come to an end—they're going to go broke because of escalating rates of workers' comp insurance," Parker said.

He said conscientious employers would have to be forced to "pay the freight" for ragtag operations with "sorry working conditions."

More importantly, the working men and women of Texas and their families are paying the price of poor job safety."

Parker's bill, sponsored in the House by Rep. Orlando Garcia, D-San Antonio, would prohibit an employer from retaliating against a worker who refuses to enter a work situation that the employee reasonably feels is unsafe.

It would also prohibit retaliation against an employee for reporting an alleged violation of health and safety laws.

Employees could sue for punitive damages as well as lost wages, Parker said.

He said a safeguard for the employer would be that any complaint would have to be filed within 90 days after the alleged violation.

"If people are really concerned about getting workers' comp rates brought down, the best workers' compensation reform possible is creating a safe environment in which to work—quit killing and maiming Texas workers," Parker said.

Joe Giam, chairman of the House Labor Legislative Committee, announced the support of Texas organized labor for Parker's bill, saying, "A clear signal must be sent that unsafe work places will not be tolerated in Texas."

Texas gets showers

Associated Press

Freezing drizzle and light snow were scattered over the Plains today and heavy snow fell in the mountains of the Southwest and Colorado.

Scattered showers fell in Oklahoma, and thunderstorms developed in Texas. At Altus Air Force Base, Okla., a thunderstorm produced hail a half inch in diameter.

A few rain showers occurred in the middle Mississippi Valley, the central Appalachians, the mid-Atlantic Coast states and southeast Florida. Arkansas had dense fog. Skies were mostly clear in the Southwest and across Nevada and California.

The freezing drizzle and light snow began late Tuesday in the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas. A freezing drizzle advisory was issued for southeastern South Dakota.

The Western snowstorm continued today after leaving 8 inches of snow Tuesday at a ski resort on Sunrise Mountain in eastern Arizona. A foot of snow fell in the southwest mountains of Colorado, and up to a foot more was expected. Snow also fell in eastern Colorado.

Heavy snow warnings or snow advisories were in effect today in mountain sections of Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from eastern sections of the southern Plains to the middle Mississippi and lower Ohio valleys and southern sections of the upper Great Lakes region, with thunderstorms most numerous over north central Texas, southeast Oklahoma and much of Arkansas; freezing drizzle and light snow from western Kansas to southeast Nebraska and Iowa; snow from central Arizona to Colorado, western sections of the central Plains, southeast South Dakota, much of Minnesota and the northern upper Great Lakes.

High temperatures were predicted in the 20s and 30s in the Rockies, the northern and central Great Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley, the Great Lakes and New England; 60s in Southern California, 60s and 70s in south Atlantic Coast states, Gulf Coast states, Tennessee Valley and much of Texas.

SELLING YOUR HOME? WORK WITH A REALTOR®

Selling your home fast for all it's worth is a complex transaction that requires the expertise of a real estate professional - especially a broker or agent who is a REALTOR®. A REALTOR® is a member of a local board of REALTORS® and therefore subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics. This Code pledges the REALTOR® to the fair treatment of sellers and buyers. A REALTOR® knows the local housing market, and is familiar with current financing sources and methods that can turn prospects into buyers. When you sell your home, a REALTOR® is objective in responding to buyer objections, and presenting offers and counter-offers. When a REALTOR® lists your home and places it in a Multiple Listing Service, this professional can work with other REALTORS® to assure your home the widest exposure to buyers. So come to this free seminar on homeselling. The more you learn, the better you can work with a REALTOR® - to sell your home fast, and at its full value.
